

Abbey Letter

Easter 2008

no. 233

One of the curious things about the Gospel accounts of the risen Jesus is that when people who knew him before his crucifixion see him after his Resurrection, they do not recognize him. They don't seem to be afraid; they don't react as so many people in Jewish Scriptures do when they encounter an angel of the Lord, expecting to drop dead. They recognize Jesus as a human being, they just don't recognize him as Jesus.

We could come up with all kinds of theories as to why Mary Magdalene doesn't recognize Jesus as he stands before her in the garden as told in John's Gospel. She is obviously deeply upset, her eyes full of tears, and her imagination full of fears of death and grave-robbers. She is so single-minded in her search for the dead body of her Lord, that even a meeting with a pair of angels becomes uninteresting unless they can give her the one piece of information she wants.

But none of these seem convincing explanations of why she doesn't recognize Jesus. This is a woman whose whole mind is full of the man who is standing right in front of her, and yet she does not know him. The simple explanation must be the true one—that real life is something we don't understand very well without divine aid. In this case, Jesus gives Mary Magdalene the ability to see by using a word. He says her name, and allows her to see who he is, and to connect the old life she used to know with the new life that now stands before her.

Let me suggest something that will sound odd—life is not “natural”. Life is God's free gift. God loves us into existence. We would not continue to exist without the ongoing and continuous love that God wants to share with us.

We have always before us the reminder of the risen Lord. We need this to help us to recognize God's life when it appears in our own lives. The Lord's voice calls us by name, so that, like the Magdalene, we suddenly look up and recognize the Lord of life standing in front of us.

But our lives don't stop. Like Mary Magdalene, we have to return to our former life, but somehow seeing that while it is still the same, it is also profoundly changed by the new resurrected life of our Lord that he wants to share with us.

We are told not to cling to Jesus, as much as we might want to do precisely that. Instead, we are told to go to others to tell them what we have experienced, continuing to seek him in the unexpected places or among the unexpected people in a mystery, as Colossians puts it, “...hidden with Christ in God,” to tell everyone about the transforming love of God made visible in Christ Jesus our Lord.

NOTES

On January 23rd, the Shaman Drum bookstore in Ann Arbor, Michigan hosted a book party for Abbot Andrew's Tools for Peace. The abbot autographed copies and gave a presentation about the book. Located a couple of blocks from the campus of the University of Michigan, this bookstore serves the university and emphasizes religious studies.

On February 22nd, Abbot Andrew visited St. Gregory Episcopal School in Chicago (a choir school for inner city boys), meeting with the students in grades five through eight and speaking to them about the monastery. While in the Chicago area, he led a workshop at St. Paul's Episcopal Church February 23rd in Riverside, Illinois on the applications of Benedictine spirituality for those who do not live a monastic life. The parish of St. Paul's has a community in formation, led by the rector, Thomas Frazier, dedicated to living by principles inspired by the Rule of St. Benedict. Abbot Andrew also preached at the Sunday Eucharist at St. Paul's the next day. The abbot then traveled to Aliquippa, Pennsylvania to be with the Community of Celebration from February 25th - 28th, acting as the community's spiritual director.

Prior Aelred plans to attend the annual Benedictine Formation Workshop, held this year from March 25th - 29th at Christ the King Priory in Schuyler, Nebraska. The topic is Early Monastic Sources and the scheduled speaker is Sr. Mary Forman O.S.B., Ph.D. from the Monastery of Saint Gertrude in Cottonwood, Idaho. Sr. Mary is assistant professor of theology at the School of Theology Seminary and the College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's University in Collegeville, Minnesota.

ADDRESS SERVICE REQUESTED

Saint Gregory's Abbey is the home of a community of men living under the Rule of Saint Benedict within the Episcopal Church. The center of the monastery's life is the Abbey Church, where God is worshiped in the daily round of Eucharist, Divine Office, and private prayer. Also offered to God are the monks' daily manual work, study and correspondence, ministry to guests, and occasional outside engagements.

The continuing existence of Saint Gregory's is made possible by the support of those who believe that the contemplative vocation within the Church finds valid expression there.

The monks ask your prayers and will be grateful for your offerings.
